Introduction

1. I remember getting an allergy a couple of years ago after eating a seafood dish at a restaurant. It turned out that I was mildly allergic to shellfish, something I hadn't known before.

2. A few months ago, I experienced an allergy after being exposed to a lot of dust while cleaning out an old room in my house. I have a mild dust allergy, but I had never had such a strong reaction before, so it really caught me off guard.

Introduction

3. One time I got an allergy was during the spring season last year. I developed a seasonal pollen allergy, also known as hay fever. I had experienced mild symptoms in the past, but that particular year, it was much worse than usual.

4. One time I had an allergy was about two years ago when I ate a dish that contained peanuts. I didn't know I had a peanut allergy at the time, so it came as a big surprise.

What your symptoms were

After eating just a few bites, I started to feel strange. My lips and tongue became itchy, and then my throat started to feel tight. Soon after, I developed red rashes on my neck and arms, and I felt a bit dizzy. It was a scary experience because I didn't understand what was happening at first..

I just felt a bit itchy around my mouth and neck, but soon after. My eyes also became watery, and I had a runny nose. It wasn't extremely serious, but it was definitely uncomfortable and a bit alarming since it was my first time experiencing something like that.

What your symptoms were

The symptoms started with sneezing and a runny nose, which I initially thought was just a cold. But soon, my eyes became very itchy and red, and I started coughing a lot. I also felt a bit short of breath, especially when I stayed in the room for too long. It was quite uncomfortable and made it hard for me to focus on anything else.

The main symptoms I had were constant sneezing, a runny and itchy nose, watery eyes, and a scratchy throat. It felt like I had a cold, but it lasted for weeks. My eyes were always red, and I had trouble concentrating during the day because I was so uncomfortable.

How you felt

I felt quite anxious, mainly because I didn't understand what was happening at the time. I thought it was maybe just spicy food irritating irritatin/my skin or something like that, but when the symptoms didn't go away after a couple of hours, I realized it was probably an allergic reaction.

I felt really tired, both physically and mentally. It's frustrating when something so simple, like dust/seafood..., can affect your health so much. I was also a bit worried because I had never felt this sensitive to dust before.

How you felt

I felt really tired and annoyed. It was frustrating because I enjoy going outside during spring, but the allergy made it hard to enjoy the weather. I also had difficulty sleeping at night because of the congestion.

I felt quite anxious and uncomfortable. It was the first time I had such a strong reaction to food, and it made me realize how serious allergies can be. Luckily, I was with friends who acted quickly and took me to a nearby clinic.

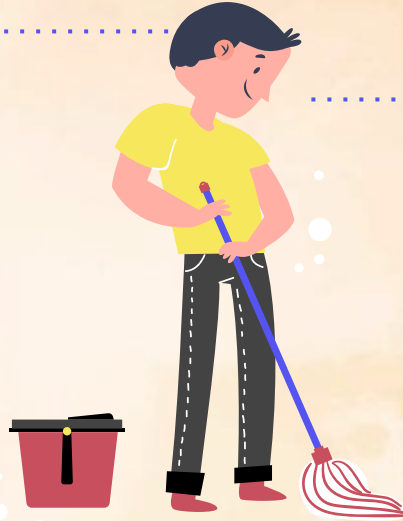

“You are what you eat”.

Idiom

how you recovered from it

To recover from it, I went to the local pharmacy and got some over-the-counter medicines. I also drank plenty of water and rested for the rest of the day. Fortunately, the symptoms started to fade by the next morning. Since then, I've been careful to avoid shellfish/....., and I always check the ingredients whenever I eat out.

I left the room immediately and took some tablets that I had at home. I also took a shower to wash off any dust on my skin and changed into clean clothes. After resting for a while and drinking lots of water, I started feeling better. The symptoms went away completely by the next day..

how you recovered from it

I went to see a doctor who confirmed it was a pollen/.... allergy. He prescribed me some medicines, which helped relieve the symptoms. I also started using a spray and tried to stay indoors when the pollen count was high. Eventually, with the medication and some lifestyle adjustments, the symptoms got under control within a couple of weeks.

At the clinic, the doctor gave me an injection, and I had to rest for a few hours under observation. After that, the symptoms slowly faded. The doctor later confirmed that I had a peanut/.... allergy, and he advised me to avoid all foods containing peanuts/... and to always check ingredient labels carefully.

Conclusion

After that incident, I became more attentive to health problems and would take immediate action when I sense anything wrong happens, minor or not.

Since then, I've been more cautious. That experience made me more aware of how important it is to manage allergies properly.

Conclusion

In short, now I try to prepare early before spring arrives by taking preventive medication and keeping windows closed during high pollen days.

Since then, I've been very cautious about what I eat. I also carry allergy tablets with me, just in case. That experience really taught me the importance of being aware of food allergies.
